Seward and Surratt

It will be remembered that a short time before the arrest of John H Surratt at Rome, Congressman Boutwell of Massachusetts asserted that the whereabouts of the assassin had been known for fully six months by the State Department The following article from the Detroit Post affords proof of this declaration

A careful examination of the Surratt correspondence arouses strong suspicions that Secretary Seward is repeating the tactics of the President in suppressing and garbling General Sheridan's dispatches relative to the New Orleans massacre, by withholding certain dispatches concerning the pursuit and capture of the fugitive conspirator The resolution passed by Congress required Mr Seward and the President to produce all the documents relating to the escape pursuit and arrest of John H Surratt But it is pretty clearly ascertained that not all the documents have been furnished and it appears probable that the documents not furnished would show that Surratt might have been arrested a year ago had the President and Mr Seward made a proper effort to accomplish it We know that this is a grave and startling suspicion but there is one or two awkward facts upon which it is founded

Certainly the proof that one dispatch has been suppressed and one, too, giving the Government ample information and ample time to have arrested Surratt more than a year ago is pretty clear One of the dispatches, No 230, was from Consul Potter at Montreal Canada dated Wednesday October 25 1865 It reads as follows

"SIR I sent a telegram in cipher yesterday informing the Department that John H Surratt left Three Rivers some time in September for Liverpool where he is now awaiting the arrival of the steamer Nova Scotian which sails on Saturday next by which he expects to receive money from parties in this city by the hands of ——, of whom he made a confidant in Liverpool It is his intention to go to Rome If an officer could proceed to England in this ship I have no doubt but his arrest could be effected "

Here is the clear mention of a "telegram in cipher" sent to Washington on the 24th of October 1865 This cipher telegram notified Mr Seward on Thursday, where Surratt was that he could not leave until he received funds to be sent by the steamer Nova Scotian, that the Nova Scotian would not sail until Saturday, that an officer could sail in the Nova Scotian and reach and arrest Surratt as soon or before his fund could reach him But this cipher telegram does not appear in the correspondence If Mr Seward actually received the cipher dispatch he might have acted upon it and he ought to have done so at once If he had done so, he might have arrested Surratt in England then If he did not receive the cipher dispatch—and there is very little likelihood that a State dispatch would be or could be lost between Montreal and Washington—he certainly did receive the letter dispatch by mail which we quoted above and on receiving it he ought to have made, and no doubt would make a demand upon the telegraph company to know why the cipher dispatch had not come to hand in time, and what had become of it But no such excuse or explanation—nor any other for that matter—appears in his answer to the resolution of Congress

But there is further evidence that Surratt might have been arrested in England and that the reason why he was not arrested was because the State Department sent instructions to our Minister and Consuls there not to arrest him The following correspondence shows this conclusively

[From Consul Wilding to Mr Seward]

UNITED STATES CONSULATE,
LIVERPOOL, October 16, 1865

SIR Mr Adams instructed me that he did not consider it advisable, with our present evidence of identity and complicity, to apply for a warrant for the arrest of the supposed Surratt.

Very respectfully Sir
H WILDING

[From Mr Hunter to Consul Wilding]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
WASHINGTON, October 17, 1865

SIR In reply to your No 538 I have to inform you that upon a consultation with the Secretary of War and the Judge Advocate General it is thought advisable that no action be taken in regard to the supposed arrest of John Surratt at present

I am, sir, your obedient servant
W HUNTER,
Acting Secretary

Upon this correspondence the question naturally arises whether Mr Hunter, acting Secretary during Mr Seward's temporary absence acted under the advice of Secretary Stanton and Judge Holt or whether Secretary Stanton and Judge Holt acted under the advice of Mr Hunter and the President What was the opinion of Secretary Stanton and Judge Holt? It may have been that England would not give up Surratt upon our demand It is quite likely this was their opinion for it is now claimed by Mr Seward's friends that the British Government would not have given the criminal up that England had repeatedly refused to surrender fugitive Confederate criminals guilty of murder arson and other crimes that the English courts would have held that Surratt's crime was wholly a political one and hence he would not have been surrendered and that, after such a result, other governments would have adopted the English precedent so that Surratt never could be captured, or that he might, after that continue to live in England in full security Secretary Stanton and Judge Holt might have taken this view of the matter, and so expressed themselves But if they did so it then became the sole duty of the State Department to decide whether the demand should be made, even if it should be refused

Suppose the demand had been made and suppose England had refused it Does not every man see that this was Mr Seward's opportunity to put the English Government in the most awkward position possible? Surratt was no ordinary criminal The crime with which he was connected was one that shocked all Christendom, and was abhorred by all governments

These are not all the points of suspicion raised by a careful study of the correspondence Surratt remained in Paris some time There is no dispatch given from our Minister or our Consuls there relative to his visit to France There is no dispatch given from Mr Seward to our Minister in France There is no record of any step having been taken to trace Surratt's course in France nor to ascertain who were his companions and friends there

From October 1865, to April 1866—a period of six months—there is not the slightest trace of any effort on the part of the State Department to arrest the fugitive or even to track him Detective agents may have been at work, but his discovery and arrest seems to have been the result of an accident so far as the State Department is concerned For six months after the pursuit had been dropped and our Consul advised not to procure his arrest, Surratt was betrayed by a comrade who had no connection with the United States Government, and who appears to have been actuated by the double motive of jealousy and a desire to obtain the reward offered for the discovery of the fugitive. But for this betrayal which was carried to our Minister, and not brought out by any exertion of his Surratt might still be at large Moreover, after the fugitive had thus been betrayed and discovered our Minister was compelled to send to the United States for photographs of Surratt, in order to identify him Now, if the State Department had been active or shrewd, or even moderately interested in the matter, it certainly seems that the very first steps to be taken would be to send to every Consul and Minister of the United States photographs and descriptions of the conspirator and orders to keep a sharp lookout for him Consul Potter from Canada had written that Surratt was on his way to Rome Consul Wilding from Liverpool had notified Mr Seward that Surratt was en route for Rome Minister Adams knew that Surratt was going to Rome Mr Seward was informed, still later that Surratt had left England on the way to Rome This was in September and October 1865 Yet when in April 1866, Minister King at Rome was told that Surratt was in the Pope's dominions by Surratt's comrade who betrayed him Minister King was taken by surprise and did not know what to do He had no instructions on the subject, no description of Surratt and no copy of the proclamation or the President offering a reward for his capture Minister King was puzzled his traces

Six months before Surratt's discovery in Italy, it was known by Mr Seward that he was going zled While Seward Potter, Adams Wilding Stanton Holt the President and nobody knows how many more knew that Surratt had gone to Rome and that Rome was the place in which to look for him Minister King at Rome had never received a line or a word to warn him to look out for Surratt The pursuit had died out six months before in England with a positive order from the State Department not to arrest the fugitive conspirator, and the Department had not stirred a finger to even keep track of Surratt after that not so much as to instruct Minister King at Rome, what to do in case he should meet Surratt there

Consequently Minister King was in a fix He cared about the matter, and did not propose to let it drop as his superiors (without his knowledge) had done He received the news that Surratt was within his diplomatic jurisdiction on the 21st of April last Spring He at once wrote to Mr Seward for instructions that ought to have been sent him long before On the 17th of May nearly a month later Mr Seward received Minister King's letter and consulted Secretary Stanton as to what was best to be done Mr Stanton consulted Judge Advocate Holt and, two days later sent instructions to Mr Seward, for Mr Seward to forward to Minister King May 21 two days later Mr Seward wrote to Minister King, sending the instructions which were to procure the affidavits concerning Surratt, and send the affidavits (not Surratt) to America June 23 nearly a month later Minister King, sent the affidavits and documents and asked what he should do next

Now occurs another period of three months during which Mr King was repeatedly writing news of Surratt, and waiting for instructions Finally, under date of October 18 Mr Seward wrote to Minister King to procure the arrest of Surratt Minister King replied November 2 that he would do so, but he was waiting for that photograph (which he should have received at least six months earlier,) with which to identify Surratt, November 7 Surratt was finally arrested almost seven months after Minister King was informed of his whereabouts These seven months had been consumed in waiting for Mr Seward to send on instructions and documents that he ought to have sent on the moment he learned, more than a year before that Surratt was on his way to Rome On the 10th of November, Surratt escaped again and on the 4th day of December—this month—he was re arrested by Consul Hale, at Alexandria, Egypt

These are the plain, unvarnished facts revealed by the correspondence We leave every reader to draw his own conclusions as to whether Mr Seward and the President exerted themselves properly to secure the conspirator and as to whether they would have arrested him at all if the matter had not been absolutely forced upon them by the betrayal the danger that these facts would come to light, and the importunity of Minister King Certainly the seven months fooled away in getting instructions to Minister King gave Surratt ample time to get clear and seek concealment in some other country, if he had suspected the pursuit, or chosen to travel farther for any other reason

THE DEFENSE OF MONTREAL, C W —COST OF WORKS $10 000 000—OBJECT OF THE DEFENSES—MILITARY HEADS —It is tolerably well known that Montreal is to be fenced in by works of so heavy a character as to cost $10 000 000—a sum which is to be paid by the home government for it is far too heavy to come out of the provincial treasury It would swallow up one year's income to the province of Canada.

The defense will be divided into three works, the chief one to be on the south side of the St Lawrence, with the object of covering the city of Montreal and the Victoria bridge The work is to consist of a number of detached redoubts, which could in time of war, be connected The area enclosed by the works would constitute an entrenched camp ground This work it is hoped will defend Montreal against any advance from the direction of Rouse's Point or Plattsburg, for the danger of invasion is only apprehended from the United States

Some works are to be thrown up on the head of the Island of Montreal, to resist any advance by this way These works are to be batteries, dispersed to cover the roads leading to Montreal, and the most favorable points on the Lac St Louis shore eastern side

By these defenses it is hoped to meet any force marching down the left bank of the St Lawrence, as General Boyd did in the last war of 1814 The Lachine road is to be especially defended.

On the north side of Montreal is a large mountain which commands the city Upon this huge natural mound are to be placed batteries to command the city and the eastern approaches to it Thus if any enemy were to cross the river in winter time below the city and advance up the bank they would be exposed to a fire of artillery from the mountain, which however they could avoid by advancing along the river side, covered by the high bank at Long Point Moreover, the fire would be too distant to be effective

St Helen's Island lies in the center of the river inclining to the south shore, and upon it are the magazine and other military stores, besides a battery pointing east and intended to command the passage of the river upward or across. This battery is to be strengthened and other works thrown up on the island It is also said that a tete de pont is to be thrown up on the Ottawa river to cover the railroad bridge at Ste Anne's which unites the two sections of the province divided by the Ottawa river The object of these defenses recommended by the Royal Engineers, and adopted by the commander of the forces, is certainly to meet a United States invading force, not a Fenian

Point Levi is now strongly fortified and thus Quebec is thought to be safe and Halifax is being made a very Constradt, with four to five hundred guns in position, and an engineer for a Lieutenant Governor But these works are only secondary and are useless without some hundred thousand men to hold them, a force which the Canadian Government does not know how to organize

The commander of the forces is an old man of about sixty years of age He has seen much peace service but little war service He seems to be awakening to the power of the United States for he not long since declared that, in two weeks Montreal could be taken, meaning by a United States force

The Minister of Militia is Hon J A Macdonald, M P for Kingston who is a lawyer of the place Of military matters he is quite innocent and besides his intemperate habits incapacitate him for the position of Minister of any office For his loyalty that is his blind adherence to the interests of the crown and his defiance of the people who pay and elect him, he is retained in his office Such are the imperial and provisional military heads of the province of Canada

MOUNT CENIS —The work is actively progressing on the temporary railway over Mount Cenis which is intended to perform the service during the eight or nine years which must still elapse before the tunnel can be made available According to experiments made, the mountain between Saint Michael and Suza can be crossed in four hours and the length of the ride between these two stations being nearly eighty kilometres (fifty miles) it follows that the speed obtained is twenty kilometres an hour Each train will be able to take fifty passengers but not more The great quantity of snow which falls six months in the year and covers the sides of the mountain makes it necessary that the railway for a considerable portion of its length should be protected by wood and iron sheds sufficiently strong to resist the force of avalanches

A BLOODY FEUD IN TENNESSEE —The Louisville journals of January 14th have the following, Two families in Carter county Tennessee named Roberts and Johnstone have been waging a bloody war against each other for 20 years during which 14 men belonging to these two families have lost their lives On the evening of the 5th inst the vendetta came to a bloody end by the sole surviving males of the Roberts and Johnstones They engaged in a personal altercation which resulted fatally to both This domestic war originated about a trifling affair

A LEGAL DECISION —A meeting of lawyers has recently been held in Paris to decide the important question Is it incompatible with the dignity of a barrister practising at the Bar to be at the same time a member of the Jockey Club ? After mature deliberation and an amount of argument naturally to be expected from an assemblage of men who make argument their chief business it was decided that such membership was incompatible Hereafter no law student is to be called to the bar in Paris if it can be proved that he is a member of the Jockey Club

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT

WASHINGTON D C Jan 23 1866

The impeachment farce is intermittent—now raging with frightful force, and then subsiding into a chill There is a set of gold and stock speculators who are trying hard to get up a panic to suit their purposes—to make money on a rise and then when their wild stories collapse, to make as much more on the fall Before you receive this letter the telegraph will inform you what progress the House Judiciary Committee has made in the business of impeachment but I venture the prediction that they will not recommend impeachment The main object of the investigation is to get certain shameful facts before the public They may not fully convince the public of the justice of impeachment but they will show that Andrew Johnson has been guilty of shameful conduct From what I hear (though I will not undertake to vouch for the exact truth,) an attempt will be made to prove first, that the President has sold Government railroads at the South to rebels at a nominal sum—railroads constructed by our soldiers during the war, second that members of the President's family have received money from certain office holders in New York, third there has been corruption in the granting of pardons fourth, that the President has violated the Constitution in reappointing men to office just rejected by the Senate I might go on further but these are the principal points. Perhaps I should have included the allegation that he has neglected to execute the Civil Rights law at the South But the real objection to the President's continuance in office is this He stands as the chief of the rebels Every Republican in Congress knows that is the great danger that threatens the country and that it is the only thing that can possibly justify impeachment The President is acting in collusion with rebels at the risk of another civil war

But in spite of this great fact it is very difficult to find reasons for his removal—such as will satisfy the country that the movement against him is not of a political character. The more shrewd and dispassionate of the Republicans see that it is a safer course to wait for a Presidential election to oust Mr Johnson His very excesses render the result of the next election sure Turn him out by force of votes in Congress (instead of votes in the country) and he may win sympathy from many people who now feel only disgust at his conduct This is the view taken by such men as Senators Fessenden, Grimes, Poland Sherman and others In the House, Garfield of Ohio, Dawes of Massachusetts Speaker Colfax, Hooper of Boston, Hale of New York and others—all able men and all but Hale sound Republicans—hold the same views Colfax however will go with a majority of his party friends no matter where they may go His idea of integrity as a party man is this—and whatever fault may be found with the statesmanship of such a course, none can deny that it renders him a safe man to hold an important office There is no danger that he will prove treacherous to his friends McPherson is another man of the same stamp I allude to the Clerk of the House He will probably be re-elected for this very reason. He can be trusted. Alas! in these revolutionary days we cannot trust all men who call themselves Republicans

The appointment of Senator Cowan as Minister to Austria, in place of Mr Motley the historian, creates some stir among the politicians Motley is one of our most brilliant historians, and has acquitted himself as a diplomatist in the best manner Mr Seward will not deny this fact; yet this first class officer is to be removed to make place for a buffoon and whisky drinker from Pennsylvania simply to pay him for his treachery to the Republicans of his State He served the President faithfully and doubtless deserves pay from his master, but there are fat places enough which Cowan might have without sending him abroad to represent us as a people at one of the prominent courts of Europe This is a sample of what the President means to do He will reward his friends. He will pay the traitors in the Senate who left their party to follow his fortunes This is just, in a certain sense, for the laborer is worthy of his hire " The Senate is urged to reject Cowan on the distinct ground that he deserted the Republicans and this is the President's pay for his desertion Shall the Senate aid the President in paying Cowan? It is a new question for that body to consider, but Chandler, of Michigan, answers it in advance, and rather roughly He says he will see Cowan and Johnson both in a very warm place before he will vote to confirm the nomination I believe he is right, but it is probable that Cowan will go through He is a Pennsylvanian and knows how to win among his fellow Senators, if he failed to do so among his fellow citizens in Pennsylvania

Senator McDougall has been absent from the Senate for several weeks and people begin to talk A malicious correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial says he has been trying to break off the habit of drinking and in doing so has killed himself! What a pity that Saulsbury will not imitate so noble an example But I fear this comforting story about McDougall will turn out to be false Some one says he saw him at Willard's Hotel a few nights since declaiming against the Radicals and asserting with all the power of which he is capable (that is raising his voice a little above a whisper) that he was relieved at the prospect before him and that he was extremely glad that he had not got to sit with such a set of fanatics and Radicals!

Since writing the above McDougal has got back to his place in the Senate and has been participating in the debate on the bill relating to the tenure of civil offices This bill by the way was reported by Senator Williams and he has managed the debate so to speak in the Senate upon it After nearly two weeks discussion it has passed by more than a two thirds majority The House, I suppose will pass it after two hours debate That is the difference between the two Houses The Senate debates till the country is almost tired of a subject and the House puts on the previous question and allows of no debate at all

Mr Williams made several able speeches in the course of the Senate debate upon the officers bill and conducted it with skill Mr Sumner tried very hard to tack on an amendment bringing before the Senate for confirmation all officers whose salaries were $1000 or upwards but in vain He then increased the sum to $1 500 and made one of his grand speeches upon it denouncing the President as " an enemy of his country " but he could get but fifteen votes for the amendment and it failed The bill as passed is a long step in the way of reform and will tie down our vehement and vindictive President pretty closely He can no longer create a vacancy All that he can do is to fill it temporarily when one has been created by the death or the resignation of an officer or of the expiration of a commission It will keep many good men in office—and some bad ones— Our friends seem to have forgotten this fact very many Copperheads here crept into office by the connivance of the President This bill keeps them in till we get a new President But the principle of the measure is wise and it should pass as it will, on the vote

STEAMER DAY

ROCKY BAR —The following is an extract from a letter from Rocky Bar published in the Idaho World of the 9th inst

Work of all kinds is almost entirely suspended A few quartz mining companies are running tunnels and getting out rock The Confederate Star and Idaho companies are taking out very rich rock The Buonaparte Mill Company of Philadelphia under the management of Messrs Van Wyck & Marx are pushing their work with great energy running tunnels They have struck a blind lode in one of their tunnel about twenty inches wide outside their one eight inches wide The rock from both will pay well They are running a base tunnel which will tap all their lodes some 120 feet below the surface and are in daily expectation of striking what they think the richest of all the Buonaparte claim After striking that they will have more ledges in front I have never seen a better commencement and you may expect when they begin to crush—which they cannot do until the weather moderates—to hear of some big cleanings up Their men are regularly paid and of course work with a will In fact all the work now done in this camp is expected to be paid for at once and not made to await cleaning up day, as formerly

THE GAS FROM OIL LAMPS—IMPORTANCE OF VENTILATION —The practice of burning common oil lamps in bed rooms is very pernicious and dangerous The gas generated by the lamp is of a poisonous nature and exceedingly detrimental to health affecting the lungs very seriously If the lamp is allowed to burn, as when in common use the gas is nearly all consumed in the chimney but when the wick is turned down, so as to give but a dim light in the room the gas generated is not consumed but escapes into the room If the windows and doors of the apartment are tightly closed, as is generally the case in the winter season, the occupants cannot escape the injurious effects A day or two ago the death of a young lady was recorded in Venango county from the effects of inhaling the poisonous gas from an oil lamp, which she kept burning in her bed room every night If it is necessary to keep a light burning let the wick be kept fully up and if there is no transom over the door, then by all means let one of the windows down an inch or more from the top The practice of retiring to bed in a closed room, with an oil lamp dimly burning, is most dangerous, and the effects upon the respiratory organs will be seriously felt, sooner or later Delicate persons cannot continue the practice long without experiencing the most serious results The importance of proper ventilation is not fully understood and appreciated by the masses, and much suffering is entailed upon humanity by breathing a foul and poisonous atmosphere, especially in sleeping apartments The health of children is frequently ruined—their constitutions utterly broken down—by compelling them to sleep in illy ventilated apartments, and the fear of "taking cold," the great bugbear of timid parents has cost many a child its life A fire place (grate) with a fire is a good ventilator, but nothing is equal to the pulling down the upper sash, which allows the foul and poisonous air to escape—and no room is so close that enough fresh air cannot find its way in through cracks and openings about the joints of doors and windows to supply the place of the escaping vitiated atmosphere Some persons have stoves in their sleeping apartments, and they are almost as objectionable as lamps, unless proper ventilation is secured The openings at the top of the windows should be regulated by the degrees of cold, as in sharp weather a very small aperture will be sufficient, while in milder weather the process of ventilation is less active, and more space is required Never allow the lower sash to be raised, as a cold current is thus thrown into the room, and there is danger of the occupant taking cold The foul air rises and rests against the ceiling, gradually descending until, if not discharged, it fills the whole room If the top of the window be lowered it rushes out, and the fresh air at once comes from all accessible points below to the relief of the sleeper.

IMPORTANT TO TOBACCO CHEWERS AND SMOKERS —If what is said by the Philadelphia Press below be true, and we have no reason to doubt it, we imagine that Philadelphia is about the only city in the Union where such a scandalous trade would be tolerated. The Press says

" Everybody who is in the streets at a late hour of the night or early in the morning may notice individuals about the fronts of restaurants, hotels and bar rooms, gathering from the streets and gutters the stumps of cigars that have been swept out or emptied from spittoons, and will wonder what possible use can be made of them For the benefit of pipe-smokers and tobacco chewers we can give some information on that subject. There are a number of establishments in this city to which this filthy refuse is taken and sold, and where it goes through the following process: It is washed, dried in the sun or over a fire, placed in a small mill and ground, and then neatly put up in small packages and sold as a superior article of fine-cut chewing and smoking tobacco, of various fancy brands. The quantity of "old soldiers," as the boys call them, thus gathered, remodeled and sold every day is almost incredible The general quality of the tobacco which goes through this process is said to be excellent "

The Republican pleads in defense of sundry Judges of the Supreme Court that "they are old, too old to be moved by any other ambition than to perform their duty " We have heard something like this before We once had an "old public functionary in the Presidential chair, who used to plead that he could not be a traitor because he was "too old to have any ambition " And this same old public functionary brought upon the country a terrible war Also, there was a quack whose "sands of life were rapidly running out' for some ten or twelve years, and who from motives of pure benevolence devoted a considerable money to the advertisement of a certain remedy Since that time the people have grown a little suspicious of these venerable Cashys, who are too old to do anything wrong The popular prejudice is against fossils —St Louis Democrat

Causes and Effects

That the Democratic party should have sympathized most intimately with the late great rebellion, will not seem strange when we consider the conduct of that party in reference to every previous rebellion in our country. And when it is shown that the founder of that party was the friend of rebellions generally and that he taught his followers to oppose and resist every effort to enforce the national authority when that authority was disputed by disaffected citizens it will appear still less strange that the great Southern rebellion should have had the countenance of the Democratic party.

To establish the facts just stated it is only necessary to refer to history. No better proof of Jefferson's principles could be desired than that furnished by himself. We lay out of consideration every other authority, and appeal to one which our political opponents cannot question.

The first considerable disturbance that arose after the achievement of our national independence was that which is known as "Shay's Rebellion." This was an insurrection among the anti Federalists in Massachusetts. It grew in part out of the discontents produced by the acts of the authorities of that State in promptly assuming their share of the debt that was contracted in the prosecution of our war for independence. The turbulent classes wished to repudiate these obligations. They also protested against taxation, and insisted that laws should be enacted to stay the collection of debts. They even clamored for an equal distribution of property, and held conventions and put forth seditious appeals to inflame the popular mind against the Government. The movement soon assumed a formidable shape, and the insurgents quickly appeared in arms. But the authorities acted with promptitude and energy,—decisive measures were taken, and the rebellion was suppressed in a few months with but little bloodshed.

The inciters of this rebellion were persons who opposed any stronger government than the old Confederation. Those who suppressed it were in favor of a more consolidated Union under a General Government which might have power to enforce its authority. In other words, the rebels were "State rights" extremists, and the loyal men were Federalists. Let us now place in contrast the views of Jefferson and those of Washington in regard to this rebellion.

At this time, (1786–87) Jefferson was in France. From Paris he wrote to Col. Smith, (Works, Vol II, p 318) expressing his views of the Massachusetts rebellion in the following language: "The British ministry have so long hired their gazetteers to report lies about our being in anarchy that the world has at length believed them, and what is more wonderful, we have believed them ourselves. Yet where did this anarchy ever exist except in the single case of Massachusetts? And can history produce an instance of a rebellion so honorably conducted? God forbid that we should ever be twenty years without such a rebellion. We have had thirteen States independent for eleven years. There has been one rebellion. That comes to one rebellion in a century and a half for each State. What country can preserve its liberties if its rulers are not warned from time to time that this people preserve the spirit of resistance? Let them take arms. What signify a few lives lost in a century or two? The tree of liberty must be refreshed from time to time with the blood of patriots and tyrants. It is its natural manure."

This passage it is impossible to consider without wonder. An insurrection had occurred which had thrown the whole country into the greatest alarm. The most gloomy apprehensions filled the breasts of our best and ablest patriots. There was danger that the discontent would infect other States, that a general civil war would ensue, that Great Britain would take advantage of the quarrel to interfere in our affairs, and that the result would be the utter subversion of our liberties. Yet notwithstanding all this—notwithstanding that these dangers were with the utmost difficulty averted, Jefferson could exclaim "God forbid that we should ever be twenty years without such a rebellion!" Surely the great Edmund Burke was right when in his "Reflections on the French Revolution," he said in reference to the Jeffersonian school of politicians: "A cheap, bloodless reformation, a guiltless liberty, appear flat and vapid to their taste."

Is it now a subject of wonder that the Democratic party should have sympathised with the late rebellion? What else could have been expected from a party whose principles are derived from a man who devoutly wished for a rebellion at least every twenty years, and who declared that without an occasional rebellion, the liberties of the country could not be preserved?

Let us now contrast the national and patriotic views of Washington at this crisis with those of Jefferson, as above given. When the great deliverer of our country was informed of the disorders in Massachusetts, he exclaimed in a letter to General Knox: "Good God! who, besides a Tory could have foreseen, or a Briton predicted them?" And to Colonel Humphries he wrote: "What gracious God! is man, that there should be such inconsistency and perfidiousness in his conduct. It is but the other day, that we were shedding our blood to obtain the constitutions under which we now live,—constitutions of our own choice and making, and now we are unsheathing the sword to overturn them!" In a letter to Madison, he said: "How melancholy is the reflection that in so short a time we have made such large strides towards fulfilling the predictions of our trans atlantic foes! What stronger evidence can be given of the want of energy in our Government than these disorders? If there is not power in it to check them, what security has a man for life, liberty and property?"

It will be observed that Jefferson calls warnings like these uttered by Washington, "lies about our being in anarchy", and that while Washington was looking upon these disorders with the greatest alarm and using all his influence to check them, Jefferson was inventing excuses for the rebellion and even justifying it, and praying that such scenes might be repeated at least as often as every twenty years! This is the record. No one can gainsay it. While our best patriots were using every effort to avert civil war the father of the Democratic party was exclaiming: "Let the people preserve the spirit of resistance. Let them take arms. The tree of liberty must be refreshed with blood. It is its natural manure!" Does anybody wonder therefore that this party sympathises with rebellions?

In these cases it is easy to trace the connection from causes to effects. We have had a terrible civil war. It grew directly out of the principles inculcated by Jefferson and his followers. What better proof of this fact could be desired than that above given? It is well for the people to see where this evil had its origin. It is well to go back to the beginning and to mark the causes which produced the late disorders. In the anti national dogmas of the Democratic party in the jealousy of the States of the authority of the General Government in the lax principles of government instilled by Jefferson and in his doctrine that resistance to established authority was the right of any portion of the people who might happen to be discontented with the conduct of public affairs, we discover the causes which led to the terrible ordeal which the nation has lately passed through.

John Bright is accused of Americanizing England.

Trouble Among Friends

It seems that Postmaster General Randall has lately been doing a thing which his reconstructed friends can in no wise approve. Therefore the said reconstructed with true independence are speaking out against the Johnson Administration—and this though it has done so much for them. At the breaking out of the rebellion there were divers and sundry little bills due the Post Office Department from offices in every part of Dixie and Postmaster Randall lately grew quite importunate for the payment of these little sums. Many of the defaulting chivalry failed to respond and the consequence is that several hundred offices have been closed. These proceedings have greatly exasperated the high minded chivalry. That Southern gentleman should be dealt with in this monstrous cruel barbarous and extortionate manner is too much for a grossly abused but hitherto meekly patient people to endure. Accordingly the Richmond Enquirer walks into the Postmaster General after this fashion:

To the persecution of the Postmasters, he joins the persecution of entire communities, who are no more participants in or responsible for the imputed delinquency of the Postmasters, than are the inhabitants of the Corea. It is a new mode, truly in a civilized country and under a regular government to put a whole community under interdict as the mode of collecting the dues of an individual! The negro device of taking the hat from the head of his debtor is a tame proceeding compared with the enterprise of the Postmaster General who reduces a whole neighborhood to a state of bareheadedness if an alleged debtor fails to satisfy him by the return mail, or with other required dispatch. He puts all to torture to bring one to confession! With a bitter mockery instead of the mail to which they are entitled he serves them with black mail! The children ask for bread and he gives them a stone. They ask for fish and he gives them a serpent. He virtually says to every community concerned that unless they will contribute and pay up the sum claimed of some individual not in office but supposed to be possibly in their midst, unless they will hunt up the alleged delinquent though he may be a thousand miles away or long ago dead and make him correspond with the Department, to the latter's satisfaction their Postoffice shall be shut up. They shall be punished for his delinquency. Such monstrous injustice such barbarous interdict such heathenish torture such black mail exaction are worthy of the days of thumb screws and the boot, but are a disgrace to any people or government professing civilized principles or acknowledging the obligations of justice and decency. We record the proceeding with indignation at the local outrage and with a sense of burning shame for the government which enacts it.

It begins to be pretty evident that the South is getting "irritated again. People should be careful. The Administration, we fear is not doing what it ought to pacify the South. Why can't the country have a "compromise? The Constitution as it is "amended in such a manner as to secure our Southern brethren against their creditors etc., is the very least thing that should be offered. To be compelled to pay debts honestly due, is peculiarly irritating to the chivalrous mind.

But there is still another phase of this subject which we cannot look on with pleasure. The Enquirer, it will be seen is ashamed of the Federal Government. This we must be sorry for, because, under the present Executive, we of the North have little reason to be proud of it. And besides this it is really painful to witness such wrangling among friends as this little matter of delinquent revenues has raised.

FROM MONTANA

The Walla Walla Statesman publishes the following letter from Helena:

Several new and rich discoveries were made last fall and winter and hundreds are still prospecting. As the winter has been mild and provisions cheap, prospecting has been pursued with success. Good reports greet our ears daily from all directions.

Your clerk, whom I saw in town a few days ago, informed me that several rich and extensive quartz lodes have been struck in Boulder Valley and cause a brisk business there, also that the news from Highland Gulch sixty five miles from Helena, which created so much excitement last fall, is very flattering. In fact, I feel quite confident in saying that Montana will be a big thing in the future.

I read your letter in the Montana Post. You were but right in saying that people in Washington Territory were blind to their own interests in not opening the Mullen Road. There was an immense amount of goods that came in from Umatilla on pack animals, and could the same be forwarded by teams at reasonable rates your business men would do the principal Montana trading. The Missouri river will not do to depend on for in a low stage of water, the boats can't come any further than Milk Creek, and teamsters have to freight over a hostile Indian country and fight their way the whole distance through.

The wagon road is now finished to the Mussel Shell on the Missouri, and some predict a big town springing up there, called Kerchville City.

There is considerable excitement about the Pipe Stone quartz and Boulder Valley diggings and I think the coming spring will witness a great rush to the mountains. Rattle Snake is turning out big and silver is exhibited from there by the hundred pounds.

Helena, is at present, very dull. The large business houses barely make expenses. "A man for breakfast," or supper, creates no excitement, and the class killed are not much missed.

FROM WALLA WALLA

We clip from the Statesman of the 15th inst:

SERIOUS ACCIDENT

On last Friday 8th inst a daughter of Mr Robert McCool met with a painful if not serious accident while going home from the St. Vincent's Academy. The facts are, as near as we can learn about as follows: A cousin of the child—for she is not more than eight or nine years old—was in the habit of letting her ride his horse a fiery beast home after school let out and on last Friday he placed the little girl on the horse, took the bridle in his hand and led the way home. About three quarters of a mile from town and a half mile from home, they came to a creek, and giving the reins to the child told her to ride across the creek and he would cross the foot log. It seems that the horse made the stream first and before the gentleman could prevent him, commenced trotting. From a trot he proceeded into a gallop and from a gallop into a run. The child was thrown off, and her dress catching on the saddle she was dragged in this position until the horse reached Mr McCool's farm. When the horse was caught one of the unfortunate girl's legs was found to be broken, the other badly bruised, and her forehead gashed and cut up in a horrible manner. Medical aid was at once procured and at last accounts hopes were entertained for her recovery.

THE SPRING TRADE

Everything gives indication of lively times for Walla Walla and Wallula the coming season. Teamsters and packers wear smiling faces and transportation is already being engaged for freighting to the Idaho and Montana mining regions.

Two pack trains left here this week for Kootenai, loaded with flour. Flour is now commanding a good price at Kootenai and the owners of these trains expect to make a handsome profit on their cargoes. The road is said to be clear of snow the greater part of the distance.

COPPER MINE

A miner who has spent several years in the upper country says there is a well defined copper vein in the Grand Coulé, a few miles from the Columbia river. He says the ore crops out in considerable quantities and the vein has every appearance of being a rich one. If the mine is as represented there is no reason why it could not be made profitable to work it for it is only a few miles from the head of steam navigation on the Columbia.

LOW PRICES

Fresh butter is now selling in this market at 50 cents per pound and eggs at 25 cents per dozen. These are lower prices than have ever ruled here before at this season of the year.

ITEMS FROM THE BLACKFOOT ROAD

A new bridge to accommodate the wagon travel is in course of construction near by the old one on the Palouse river.

A new bridge is also being built across the Tucanon and will be completed by the first of March.

The weather on the Spokane has been mild all winter. Snow not more than about fourteen inches deep at any time on the Spokane prairie and that only for five days. Schnebly's bridge on the Spokane will be completed by the first of March.

Snow about three feet deep at Pend Oreille City according to the Indian reports. The abutments of the new bridge on Hangman's Creek and also those of the Mullen bridge on this side were carried away by the late high water. A new bridge will be immediately built at one of these places.

From Owyhee

We clip the following items from the Owyhee Avalanche of the 9th inst:

REVENGE

A great many individuals during the past three or four years in Owyhee have received ample cause in the loss of friends or relatives and property by the savages for bitter retaliation whenever opportunity offers. Acting on this principle several have cast their fortunes in the lot with Gen Crook and Mr Indian will not gain anything by the operation. We notice Jim Jordan among the number who have anything but pleasant recollections of the earlier days in Owyhee. Many citizens would gladly join in the work were it possible to procure animals aside but the simple fact is the Indians have got nearly every horse and mule in the country and none are obtainable. Col Jennings would have been in the war path also ere this had not matters near the Reynolds demanded almost constant attention. He has sacrificed more time on the [illegible] family for the public good than most any other person and he is right in looking out for No 1 to some extent.

DASHAWAY

This ledge presents fair prospects. A shaft to the depth of fifty six feet has been sunk this winter. It is of the same class of ledges as the Allison and exhibits similar appearances so far as opened to view. At the bottom of the shaft the ledge is twenty inches wide with solid casings. Messrs Agnew and Shoenbar have the ledge and are about to make a mill test of the ore. Too much water has caused operations to temporarily stop on the Whisky Gulch mine.

ANOTHER LARGE ASSAY

A sample of ore from the Sherman ledge, in Flint District was assayed by King Webb & Co Feb 4th and gave this result per ton:

Silver	$4 809 75
Gold	5 21
Total	$4 944 90

That this ledge is of extraordinary richness is no longer a question. Repeated careful assays and hand mortar tests have shown it to be as represented.

The First Extensions north of the Poorman we some time ago announced sold in New York. The ground includes six hundred feet and sold for $150 000, or at the rate of $250 per foot. The money has been raised and a number of the original owners have already received their pay. It is intended to commence opening up the mine in April, as we learn by Mr D H Jackson who has been appointed Superintendent and has received instructions to this effect. Messrs D. H Jackson, Balcom Brewster D C Baker Lytle, Belt and Thornton are among the lucky ones in this transaction.

The Cosmos Company is making the necessary preparations to start up the mill. Another week's labor about the mine and mill will put everything in order. The officers here have engaged in experimenting with the ore and making an application of Lewis' process—which has been exceedingly satisfactory. The fact has been determined that the loss in milling has been greater than the saving, and the new process will reverse the old order of things.

We have outside information from New York that the financial affairs of the company will soon be adjusted.

The New York and Owyhee Company will at once commence work in their No 1 (or lower) tunnel on the Hays & Ray ledge. There remains four hundred feet to be run to reach the original shaft on the Poorman and at the point of intersection will be two hundred and fifty feet below the surface. The work will be pushed forward rapidly.

The Woodstock ledge has been constantly "gone down on," and is reported as making a most satisfactory showing at the bottom of the shaft—two and a half feet wide and richer than ever. Bully for the Woodstock.

The Vulcan ledge is being worked. Informed that it looks as well as ever, and that much good quartz is piling up at the works.

LATEST FROM GENERAL CROOK.—It appears says the Boise Statesman, of the 12th inst., that there was a mistake in the reported number of Indians killed and captured in the Stein's mountain fight. A private letter from Silver City of the 19th ult, says:

Messenger Pickett has just arrived, and says that instead of forty there were sixty killed—ninety in all—and thirty prisoners, twenty seven old and three young ones. Since then the General has taken in a band of seventeen, five bucks killed. He has also been to Camp Smith for supplies and every available man, ditto from Lyon and I believe from Boise. The messenger thinks the next expedition will consist of two hundred effective men, and the "objective pint" is a camp of one hundred and fifty Indians, on the Malheur pretty well up as reported by some of the captives. Major Hunt goes from Camp Lyon with his command as soon as Pickett gets back. Major Hunt did good service in the Stein's mountain fight; his horse became unmanageable and he went in on foot. Captain Perry is also to connect with Gen Crook at the preliminary rendezvous. It may be two weeks or more before the result of this intended campaign will be known, but the General seems to understand the business perfectly and the public need not be uneasy. Some of the captured squaws say that the celebrated 'Big Foot' was killed at Stein's mountain but that may be taken for what it is worth. The Boise 'pots are made to perform good service, and altogether the situation' is most cheering for those who are interested in suppressing the Indians. It moreover shows that it was not more men that was wanted, but more man."

A NEW TOWN ON THE PLAINS.—A correspondent of the Washington Chronicle writes as follows of the rapid creation of a small village on the Union Pacific Railroad, about 30 miles from Omaha:

All along the road where the company has established its stations, settlements are springing up rapidly, and here at this point whence I write North Platte Station, where three weeks ago there was nothing, are already some twenty buildings including a brick engine round house calculated for forty engines built on a stone foundation, at present nearly completed for ten engines, a water tank of beautiful proportions as they are all along the road kept from freezing by being warmed by a stove also fixtures in every tank house a frame depot of the usual beautiful design, a large frame hotel, nearly finished to cost about $18,000, a long spacious, movable building calculated for a store, eating house and for storage purposes, and sundry other buildings. To this point the company think of removing their offices from Omaha and establishing it as a more convenient base for furthering their operations west.

Engagements with choir singers and organists in New York are generally made from May to May but some churches adopt the system of engaging only from quarter to quarter. A prime tenor singer commands a salary of from $500 to $800 a year.

A young French pianist, Leon R quer has been voyaging round the world and whilst in Otaheite the eldest daughter of Queen Pomare fell in love with him, and they are now betrothed.

SUCCESSFUL BURGLARY—STOWELL CHAMBERLAIN & CO'S SAFE BLOWN OPEN AND ROBBED.—Our town was startled on Friday morning by the discovery of a great burglary in the Banking Office of Messrs Stowell Chamberlain & Co. The safe was a double one made by L. Lillie & Son of the largest size, weighing many thousand pounds. The burglars obtained entrance to the [illegible] by prying open one of the windows [illegible]. In the lower left hand corner of the right hand outer door of the safe which was two inches thick a hole was drilled through which powder was introduced. It was blown open separating the outside from the bolts and lining [illegible] doing it a complete wreck. The lower hinges of both doors were broken off. They next attacked the inside safe which was two feet high, extending the width and depth of the [illegible] side of the main safe. This safe was to an inch [illegible] with folding doors. They drilled a [illegible] through the [illegible] they had [illegible] the safe [illegible] open both doors. This gave them access to the money and [illegible] twenty fresh [illegible] which they [illegible]. The larger portion of this belonged to special depositors. They also took valuable papers belonging to [illegible] a bag of gold and silver [illegible] hundred [illegible] the safe was made to order by Mr Lillie [illegible] was supposed to be burglar proof [illegible] the safe [illegible]. No trace of the burglars has been discovered. They [illegible] gunpowder [illegible] The clerk [illegible] there until twelve o'clock at night. They [illegible] I read about [illegible] showing they were [illegible] at work.

NEW ARRANGEMENT.—THE OLD BUCHTEL & CARDWELL PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY 89 First Street has passed into the hands of JOSEPH BUCHTEL Proprietor and Operator who having just returned from San Francisco with ALL THE LATEST IMPROVEMENTS is prepared to take every style of picture known to the art.

RAILROADS IN NEW YORK.—There are many schemes for a railroad in New York among others is a steam railroad under ground. While the people in New York are in a query which railroad to favor the people of Oregon favor KOHN & FISHEL with their custom which they will always reciprocate by selling the best and most fashionable clothing gents furnishing goods etc for the least money.

THE STEAMSHIP "IDAHO."—From the San Francisco Times, we clip the following extended description of the new steamship Idaho. We are informed that upon the return of the Montana to San Francisco, the Idaho will be put upon the Oregon trade.

For many years the traveling public of the Pacific coast were compelled to make use of vessels which had a great show of splendor and comfort about them; but very little real security, since but few of them were built for the seas they were destined to trade upon. Recently, however, the attention of shipowners has been drawn to the necessity of combining strength with accommodation in steamers intended to face the heavy gales which periodically sweep our coast, and visit with especial severity the Northern portion of it. To supply the pressing need of staunch boats, the Montana and Idaho, of the well known "Anchor Line," have been built by Patten Bros., of Bath, Maine, and are owned by that firm. The former of these vessels has been described already, but we now propose to give a sketch of the latter, which, though a sister ship of the Montana, differs from that vessel somewhat in construction and considerably in her interior arrangements. The steamer Idaho was built by the firm already named, at a cost of about $250,000, in 1866, and has recently arrived in our harbor, where she now lies. Her dimensions are as follows: Length, 215 feet, beam, 31½ feet, depth of hold, 22 ft. Her tonnage by measurement is 1,077. She is built in the most substantial manner possible, of oak, yellow pine and hackmatack. From keelson to bulwarks her lining is strengthened by a process termed "caging," that is driving stout bolts of oak through from the skin to the outer planking. This prevents the timbers from working when at sea, and binds all parts firmly together. The Idaho carries a screw propeller twelve and a half feet diameter and nineteen and a half feet pitch. This is moved by a shaft fifty-six feet in length, revolved by a direct acting single cylinder engine, working by low pressure. The cylinder is a forty-four inch one, and has a three-foot stroke. The machinery was all built by G. M. Patten & Co. The vessel is provided against every emergency, whether of water or fire. To suppress the latter there is first, a steam fire apparatus attached to the boilers, and this will pour a volume of hot steam into the hold at a moment's notice. There are besides these five force-pumps for freeing the ship from water, and these throw a continuous stream ten inches in diameter. The whole of the pipes belonging to the machinery, and indeed all used in the ship are of copper; not a single iron pipe has been put in. Fire hose is laid to every part of the vessel and kept in constant readiness. She carries two masts, the after one fore and aft rigged, and the forward one square rigged; in other words, she is rigged as a brigantine. Her topmasts are fitted with patent screw fids, which render it easy to lower and house them at the approach of bad weather. Her fore yard also lowers down on deck. Right aft, on the upper deck, are the offices, and forward of them the ladies' cabin, a cozy little room, nicely furnished, where the women-folk can sit and sew, and get plenty of fresh air and a fine view of the sea. Forward, is the gentlemen's smoking room. This is plainly furnished, and is fitted with a heating apparatus, and here a barometer is suspended for the use of weather prophets. Next is the engine room. Adjoining is the galley, well fitted with every modern appliance for the facilitation of nautical culinary operations. In fact, there is such an abundance of "dodges" about this galley that one cannot help constantly expecting the cook to turn into something funny, as in a pantomime. The officers's berths come next, and then the captain's stateroom, a snug, compact apartment; and then the pilot house—The compass used on the Idaho on her passage out was a patent spirit compass, in which the sustaining medium is a fluid composed of spirit and glycerine. The very slightest fluctuation is instantaneously transmitted and perceived by the means of this, and the instruments so prepared are not apt to get out of order. Forward of the wheel-house is the fore cabin hatch, and beyond that the windlass, a double action one, and then the bows are reached. We should have mentioned that the vessel is provided with two donkey engines and a steam winch, and can discharge cargo by steam at all three hatchways together. On the davits hang four large life-boats, one of which is metallic. Going aft and descending the companion way, the visitor finds himself in a noble saloon, [illegible] feet in length, 15 feet in width and eight feet high. It is well lighted by a large sky-light, is airy, roomy and thoroughly comfortable. At the tables, which run down the center, a hundred people can dine, and the comfort of the passengers is ministered to by lounges and settees ranged along the sides of the saloon. The whole of the furniture is covered with a bright patterned Wilton carpet—a species of velvet. Round the saloon are situated the state-rooms, forty in number, each room containing three berths. The state-rooms are fitted up in the most modern style, each being furnished with a patent safety lamp, locked in the bulkhead, to guard against accidents. Underneath the mattress, in every berth, are placed life-belts, and there are enough of these on board for every man, woman and child the law allows her to carry, and then leave a good margin for losses. The decoration of the saloon is simple and practical. The pannels are [illegible] white, edged with gold, and the moldings [illegible] by a delicate tint of pink. In the center of each panel a single flower is painted, and so well as to leave a [illegible] effect, and for every one of the forty doors there is a different flower—a variety the attainment of which cost no little trouble. The Idaho carries one hundred and seventeen cabin passengers, and one hundred and thirty in the steerage, which is much better than [illegible] steerages generally are. On her passage out she proved herself to be all that was desired of her—an [illegible] boat, and without the slightest tendency to roll, a most rare virtue in a screw steamer. As a specimen of a school of substantiality in naval architecture which we are glad to see superseding gilding and gingerbread work, she is well worth seeing, and reflects credit on her builders. She will shortly be put upon the line with the Montana, by Messrs. Aldrich, Merrill & Co., her [illegible]

"ROLL OF HONOR."—At the request of Mr. Gatch, Principal of the Portland Academy, we publish the following "Roll of Honor" which comprises the names of those students of the quarter ending Feb. 15th, whose [illegible] was unexceptionable:

THE "NEW WORLD."—The steamer New World will leave Portland on Friday morning at seven o'clock, for Victoria, Olympia, and way ports. Capt. Charles Windsor, who came around on the McNear will command her. The people of the Sound, through the persevering and energetic efforts of the owners, are about to have the finest and perhaps fastest, steamer ever on Puget Sound. The World has an immense freight capacity, and her passenger accommodations will make the traveling public of the Sound open their eyes in wonder. She was built for the New York and Albany trade, but was shortly sent around to run between San Francisco and Sacramento. On the first of May 1864, she arrived here, for the O. S. N. Co. to run from Portland to the Cascades. She is a first class boat, having been built of excellent material, and is now as sound in every part as the day she was launched. We [illegible] the traveling public of the Sound on being about to be relieved of the necessity of putting up with [illegible] forts of the tubs on which they have been accustomed to travel.

CIRCUIT COURT—SHATTUCK, JUDGE.—In this court, the [illegible] Wednesday, the 20th, were as follows:

R. A. Clark vs. Wm. Musgrove, et al.; verdict of jury for plaintiff; damages for trespass on plaintiff's lands.

W. P. Abrams & Co. vs A. J. Remington, action on promissory note; judgment by default, for $442 12.

C. M. Carter vs. Richard White; action to recover $430, for services rendered defendant as Claim Agent, in procuring patent to land claim; jury empanneled.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.—Mr. A. J. Hubler has been missing from the Lincoln House since the evening of the 13th inst. He had been for some time laboring under an aberration of mind, and it is feared that he has destroyed himself, though it may be possible that he has left the city to escape imaginary conspirators, who, he thinks, are trying to kill him. He has been for a long time under the care of Mr. Fletcher, who was formerly his partner, but on the 12th, he slipped out of his room during a brief absence of Mr. F., and no trace of his whereabouts since then has been discovered. When he left he wore a suit of dark clothes, black hat and large dark-brown overcoat. He is about 35 to 38 years old, large sized, nearly six feet in height, has very large Roman nose, thin face, without whiskers. Any information respecting him will be very gladly received by his friends here, and the informant will be suitably rewarded. Please communicate with Mr. Fletcher or OREGONIAN office.

FREIGHT LIST PER STEAMER AJAX.—The Ajax took, yesterday, the following list of freights for San Francisco: 9,300 qr sks flour, 4,430 boxes apples, 104 boxes eggs, 52 sks onions, 25 gunnies bacon, 20 rolls leather, 20 hf bbls butter, 12 bales wool, 20 hf bbls dried apples, 4 bbls liquors, 8 gunnies hair, 11 cases bottles, 7 cases lard, 36 cases mdze, 2 bales mdze, 26 packages mdze, 3 cases furs, 3 coops fowls.

DO TELL.—The Sacramento Bee, a paper which ought to know better, has an article on the late flood at Walla Walla, which it credits to the "Walla Walla (Oregon) Statesman." The same article was published in the San Francisco Times under the head of "Disastrous Freshet at Portland." Really, our California friends would do well to mend their knowledge of geography.

TREASURE SHIPMENT.—The following is the treasure shipment per steamer Ajax, February 20th:

Wells, Fargo & Co	$83,000
Ladd & Tilton	8,500

A BIG FREIGHT.—The Montana brought up this trip 2,900 packages, measuring 822 tons. She also brought 149 passengers.

MAGIC OIL.—Prof Murray advertises this morning, his magic oil, which he says is the "best family oil in the world," for aches, pains, diseases of the skin and scalp, etc. He claims for it, too, that it is a "sure hair restorer." The genuine article bears on the bottle, his trade mark, and each bottle is accompanied with full directions for use.

DISCHARGED.—Charles Starr, charged by R. P. Olds with robbing him, on Monday night, had an examination before the Recorder yesterday, and was discharged. The case occupied the greater part of the day, making it necessary to continue till this morning, two or three cases of assault and battery and disorderly conduct.

THE CHICO MAIL.—The Owyhee Avalanche, speaking of the non-arrival of the mails via Chico, says: Last week we announced the non-arrival of said institution for over ten days. It has not yet arrived, and we never heard any one thing so universally execrated in Idaho. Yamhill is nowhere as a subject for damnation.

CATTLE FOR THE UPPER COUNTRY.—The steamer Julia yesterday took up a band of cattle destined for the upper country, and during the afternoon another band arrived at the wharf to be sent up to-day.

STRATMAN.—From Major Jack Stratman we have a bundle of new papers by the Montana. Stratman is the prince of San Francisco news dealers.

TREASURE.—The Wilson G. Hunt brought down for Wells, Fargo & Co., yesterday, $10,000 in treasure.

CLOTHING.—Barman Bros. will remove their fine stock of clothing and gents' furnishing goods into the City of Paris Store this day. Clothing sales hours from 6 o'clock A. M. to 9 o'clock P. M. after to-day.

MOTHERS, MOTHERS, MOTHERS.—Don't fail to procure Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for all diseases incident to the period of teething in children. It relieves the child from pain, cures wind colic, regulates the bowels, and by giving relief and health to the child, gives rest to the mother. Thirty-five cents a bottle. Manufactory Established in June, 1851.
STEAM POWER, NOS 625 AND 627 FRONT ST.

HAS CONSTANTLY ON HAND GROUND AND ROASTED COFFEE, GREEN COFFEE of the best qualities. CREAM OF TARTAR and SPICES of all sorts.

The undersigned, who has always enjoyed public confidence for the excellent quality of his Coffee neglects nothing to justify the good name acquired by his productions, the sale of which daily increases. The acknowledged superiority of his merchandise, which commands here, and in the markets of the interior, a relatively higher price, excites the cupidity of some manufacturers, and every day he sees increasing the number of those who, by counterfeit or imitation of his mark, seek to deceive the public, palming upon them their inferior productions for the genuine G. VENARD CHARTRES COFFEE. This fraud can deceive nobody after a trial, but only adds to the favorable opinion of the consumers the very flattering though unwilling testimony of the counterfeiters. Nevertheless, buyers should be forewarned, and placed on their guard against this practice.

Five O'Clock in the Morning

AS SUNG BY PAREPA

The dew lay glittering on the grass
A mist lay on the brook
At the earliest beam of the golden sun
The swallow her nest forsook
The snowy bloom of the hawthorn tree
Lay thickly the ground and fair
The birds were singing in every bush
At five o clock in the morning

And Bessie the milkmaid merrily sang
For the [illegible] were fresh and fair
The breeze of the morning kissed her brow
And played with her nut-brown hair
But oft she turned and looked around
As if the silence [illegible]
'Twas time for the mower to whet his scythe
At five o clock in the morning

And over the meadows the mowers came
And merry their voices rang
And one among them wended his way
To where the milkmaid sang
And as he lingered by her side,
Despite her comrade's warning
The old, old story was told again
At five o clock in the morning

A Letter from the Yacht Race

[From the London Times Jan 1]

The excitement created in this country by the great ocean yacht race found a fitting consummation in the genial hospitalities of Cowes and the complimentary interest expressed by the Queen On Saturday morning the Commodore of the New York Yacht Club and the owner of the winning yacht were presented to her Majesty at Osborne and in the evening a grand entertainment to the amateur seamen gave opportunity for the mutual congratulations and good wishes which we yesterday reported The reception given to the American visitors is certainly remarkable, but they have as certainly deserved it After all the explanations and qualifications which the event may admit, it must be allowed that the achievement was a most extraordinary one—characteristic, no doubt, of the Americans as a nation, but equally honorable to them in the boldness of the design and the completeness of the success When we first heard that a match had been made between three small pleasure yachts to sail against each other across the whole breadth of the Atlantic, in the depth of winter, from the New World to the Old, we were struck by the novelty and audacity of the proposal, but when one of these little vessels actually appeared off the Isle of Wight on Christmas day, long before she was expected, and sailed into Cowes harbor without any hurt or damage, after a voyage of nearly 3,000 miles in less than fourteen days, the marvels of the adventure impressed themselves instantly on the public mind. Instinct gave us the true measure of the success, and the American yachtsmen found themselves deservedly famous within an hour of their arrival

The event is all the more striking from our own national addiction to the pursuit in which the Americans have now for the second time excelled us. Yachting is one of the most popular pastimes of Englishmen Probably we have a greater number of Yacht Clubs than all the world, besides almost every vessel of the whole fleet is turned to actual account. In the summer months it would be hardly a port without a yacht or two in it, always, to an ordinary eye, trim, clean, and shapely vessels. Yet the Americans, when they began to sport, sent over a yacht which beat everything in these waters, and now they have accomplished a race which surpasses just as completely all the races we have ever designed Of course, it is only a special feat. We may say, if we please, that it is not a thing which could be done often, or should be done often, that it is more of a brilliant, sensational, and exceptional exploit than an example of regular, steady going practice. But the performance has a double aspect, even in this sense If we may infer the perils of the adventure from the melancholy catastrophe on board the Fleetwing, we may also infer the practicability of the passage from the perfect impunity of the Henrietta, which came into port without the loss of a spar To read the log of the winning vessel, and to see her rushing along night and day, like the Flying Dutchman, over the waves of the Atlantic, one would think such a voyage could hardly be performed twice, and yet the other two yachts were but a few hours behind her The Americans have taught us this among other things—that a vessel of 200 tons can be taken across the Atlantic at an average speed of 200 miles a day It is not the mere burden of these yachts which makes the feat so remarkable, for smaller vessels have done as much, nor yet the mere quickness of the passage for large ships have made it more quickly but the smallness of the tonnage combined with the rate of sailing renders the result very extraordinary indeed.

It was actually the slowest boat, so an American gentleman now tells us, which won the prize and that too, is an incident which should commend itself to our consideration In dimensions build, rig and equipment, the racing vessels were so evenly matched that there was not a pin to choose between them They were rather short handed, but the crews were doubtless all picked men. The Fleetwing's loss would necessarily cost her all her chance of the prize, but perhaps the Henrietta owed her victory as much to good navigation as good handling Anyhow, she won not by any great distance all things considered, but with singular ease to herself Nor does she appear to have been an uncomfortable boat in any way, or to be deficient in any of those qualities which are prized as much as speed in English yachts. Our sailors will do well to note all the circumstances which characterised the contest and determined its event—the more so, indeed, on account of its very novelty when contrasted with our own performances Very likely some of our "canoe voyages" and similar marine adventures may be as memorable in their way as this ocean race, but the fact still remains that the Americans accomplished the ocean race, and we did not. In fact, we should never have thought of such a thing It involves just so much of Transatlantic exaggeration as to be beyond our sphere. The longest race and the biggest stakes in the world are true American conceptions, but the actual success of the scheme is a real American triumph

The sentiments reciprocally expressed at the Cowes entertainment show convincingly how desirable it is that intercourse between Americans and Englishmen should be in every way promoted, and how useful may be the agency of kindred tastes in accelerating this result An American at the dinner plainly suggested that the two nations should bring their yachts and racehorses together, meet in a social way, and cut politics adrift. The advice was by no means unpractical With a good social understanding between the two peoples, politics, we may be perfectly sure, would settle themselves The truth is too—and we say it with great satisfaction—that this growing inclination of the Americans toward British sports is assimilating in a certain degree the national characteristics Each country may learn something of the other We may borrow a little of the American dash, daring, and contempt of routine and precedent. They may take a lesson from our patience, steadiness, tenacity, and practical estimate of matters. They show us what things are really possible, we show them what possible things are really practicable, and during all this interchange of instruction the two nations may get a sound and thorough comprehension of each other's views American character, after all, is English character at the bottom The spirit is the old Anglo Saxon spirit, modified by the conditions of the new world. The Americans say they resemble no people, they certainly resemble none but ourselves, Even in what we fancy the caricature of their ways, they do but advance on our own model. In the eyes of a German or a Frenchman, we English are as reckless, as venturesome, as prone to extravagance, and as incapable of rest as an American is in the popular conception of Englishmen We astonish the people of the continent, and the Americans, our own kinsmen, astonish us This is precisely what they have done Last year, when the French fleet paid us a visit at Spithead, nothing surprised our neighbors so much as the multitude of yachts by which they found themselves surrounded They could understand iron clads and men of war, and all other appliances of a great national marine, but what they could hardly comprehend was that combination of popular wealth, nautical tastes, and unrivaled adventure which seemed to keep whole classes of society at home upon the ocean This was the most wonderful aspect of the whole spectacle,—and now the Americans have brought their yachts all across the Atlantic to us Certainly the tribute of congratulation and compliment which they have received since their arrival has been fairly earned

Unprofitable Boarders —L H Barber, proprietor of the City Hotel, Idaho City publishes in the papers of that place the following notice to his customers

"All of you Dead Heads who can always have plenty of money to run with the Hurdy Gurdies and to gamble with, but cannot think of saving enough to pay your board, will take notice that in every instance hereafter, where they play that game for board at the City Hotel, I will place their names on my Bulletin Board in front of the Hotel which I had made for that express purpose I have become heartily tired of the above described class of people Their style is to commence boarding—the first week they pay promptly—the next week or two they never pay I have thousands of dollars in bills of this kind, and do not wish any more '

Cost of Living in New York City —To live in New York comfortably requires, according to a very general estimate, an income of not much less than ten thousand dollars per annum There are not a few families who pay that much for board alone in these days and accept rather cramped quarters even then House rent, if a man means to have a whole house, costs about a third of any considerable income and the mere household expenses of a small family would be enough to frighten a prosperous merchant of thirty years ago out of his wits, if he could get a peep at the expense book

We will not speak here of the added evils of over charging fashions which make the majority of women slaves to their needle, and keep them cutting, altering, fitting, turning and generally reconstructing, from year's end to year s end, in the frantic effort to be in the fashion and to wear what others wear This is a general evil, from which, not only New York, but all America, and not only this country, but Europe is suffering and for which there must presently, we suppose, some relief, in the shape of a revolt of English and American women against the Empress of the French, who seems to be the cause of all these troubles

What we now speak of is the monstrous cost of living—of being merely decently housed and fed in New York This city has come to be the most costly place of residence on the continent, if not in the civilized world Houses are so scarce that landlords see tenants running around like pigs in the land Cockaigne with knives and forks in their backs, begging to be eaten, it is a favor to get a decent house at a preposterous rent—at almost any sum in fact which the owner chooses to ask, and we know of families living comfortably in Europe from the rent of a house on one of the favorite avenues

When the rent is paid that is not all Marketing is upon just as extravagant a scale as house rent The most comfortable people in the city are the grocery and market men they seem to ask what they please and get it, too and if they only put away their money they must accumulate fortunes more quickly than lucky miners in Montana or Colorado

The fact is that New York is the most uncomfortable place in the world to men and women of limited means Every year hundreds of families abandon it in disgust or despair for suburbs some of which are nearly as bad—for the New Yorker in the country is like the Englishman in France the foreordained victim of all with whom he comes in business contact

Glycerine and its Uses —This article is among the comparatively recent discoveries of science Glycerine, in a pure state is a clear, colorless syrupy liquid of a very sweet taste being the sweet principle contained in animal fatty bodies Its first introduction into medical use was in the year 1841 in the London Hospital for diseases of the skin it keeps the same moist and soft, and excludes the air without exasperation The Russians apply it to the face and ears as a protection against intense cold and it does not congeal at any temperature In ophthalmic surgery frequent and extensive use is made of glycerine, also in certain conditions of deafness It may be used as an adjuvant to the bath softening the skin pleasantly and has a high reputation as a lotion for the complexion but for all these purposes it should be perfectly pure It was not known in a pure state until the discovery of Mr R A Tilghman of Philadelphia patented in 1854 There are two manufacturers who make the best and purest article—one in London, and the other of equal celebrity in Philadelphia

In the arts the uses of glycerine are manifold in keeping the colors of organic bodies in photography to keep pictures in an unfinished state At the museum of the Faculty of Medicine at Paris, glycerine has been recently adopted as a preservative fluid for flowers and fresh plants Mr Tichborne has thus kept flowers for two years, and then made from them a water with a perfume equal to that of the flowers of the season Mustard may be kept for any length of time by its admixture Manufacturers of chewing tobacco may find it valuable in maintaining the softness of their products, while imparting sweetness to the taste Frequent efforts have been made to use glycerine in the manufacture of toilet soaps, but without success until quite a recent period, when a very beautiful article has been produced

A Thoughtful Young Married Lady —The New Albany Ledger, of January 5th has the following

In one of our main street furniture stores yesterday, might have been seen a young married couple purchasing their outfit of furniture for housekeeping The polite proprietor waited upon them in his blandest manner supposing, that they were strangers just arrived to settle in the city and not knowing that they had been married only a week He showed them his goods and they purchased all they could think of ' Our furniture dealer however thought the outfit incomplete and supposing the couple the possessor of a baby, he rolled out a full rigged crib The man blushed —so did the lady (they had been married six days), but the husband as in the other articles purchased, referred the matter of the purchase of the crib to his wife She hesitated a moment, and then with a cute look, said 'Henry its very pretty, and we might need it you know I reckon we will buy it now with the other things ' And so the crib was bought a week after marriage, and may it rock to sleep many a cherub faced baby for the happy couple

Singular Woman —A Mrs Frances F Sigel is now in Washington applying at the Pay Department for back pay for services in the Western army as cavalryman She says she enlisted in 1861 with her husband (a John Clayton) in the 4th Missouri Cavalry, and fought for two years as a cavalryman in our armies She fought under Grant, Sheridan and Rosecrans She was in the battles of Shiloh or Pittsburg Landing and Stone River, and at the latter battle her husband was killed and she severely wounded Her sex thus became known and she was discharged from service She has married since, and is now endeavoring to get the pay due her when discharged Mrs Sigel has evidently seen hard service in camp or elsewhere, and has contracted all the airs, attitudes and manners of a man? She wears a Scotch cap, cocked on one side of her head, chews tobacco and smokes She is accompanied by her present husband Both are poor and have been compelled to sleep in the station house every night they have been in Washington

Beyond the Summit —The Sacramento Union of the 8th says The Central Pacific Railroad Company are making arrangements to haul over the snow 3 000 tons of rails sufficient to lay thirty miles of track from Cisco to the Truckee river, to be laid early in the spring there being now a large force grading the road along the river — When the heavy work at the summit is completed, this portion of the line being ready, they will be ready to operate the road immediately to Crystal Peak, Nevada

New York and Brooklyn —The census of New York City shows a population of hardly three-quarters of a million, and Brooklyn has less than three hundred thousand—the two cities footing up 1 022,764 In New York there are 38,021 more women than men, and in Brooklyn the excess of women is 13 307

Fountain of Life!

THE

GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER!

IN EVERY PROGRESSIVE SCIENCE PERIODS ARRIVE when a new direction is imparted to its course These epochs proceed from discoveries of new facts shedding a light which changes the whole aspect of the science The present is an epoch of this kind and this Great Remedy, now offered to the public in connection with the theory on which it is based, is destined to effect an entire revolution in the treatment of the diseases of

by eradicating the disease entirely from the blood The FOUNTAIN OF LIFE is composed entirely of vegetable extracts It contains no Mercury or other mineral substance

The Proprietor and Discoverer of this Sovereign Remedy CHALLENGES THE WORLD to furnish anything, from the days of Esculapius down to the present time in the arcana of Medical science, which can vie with or excel the intrinsic properties of this Great Blood Purifier Its value has been tested with the happiest effect in the most obstinate cases of Scrofula, that baffled the skill of the most eminent physicians in the world No matter what form the dreadful disease of SCROFULA and KING S EVIL may have assumed it can in no way be more safely and certainly arrested in its progress than by HENLEY S GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER Thousands have been swept into their graves, who had they made a timely use of the FOUNTAIN OF LIFE, might now be enjoying the blessings of life and health It requires an article of real merit and intrinsic value to sustain itself During the stern ordeal of public experiment the FOUNTAIN OF LIFE has stood the test trial and not been found wanting

☞ Dr HENLEY guarantees to CURE any case of SCROFULA or KING S EVIL in the world and eradicate the disease entirely from the system, or no charge made —provided they will secure him his pay when they are cured

FOR REFERENCE

I would refer you to L. L. Peck, of Portland Oregon and numbers of others, as to what a miraculous effect it had in a short time, in cases that had baffled the skill of physicians for years

This is to certify that I was blind for over four months and almost blind for one year and a half I tried several eye doctors but received no benefit, I had almost given my case up as hopeless when fortunately I heard of Dr G W Brown now of Salem I was induced to try him he performed a surgical operation on my eyes, and gave me treatment I soon began to recover, and in a short time I was perfectly cured I do this in justice to one who rescued me from a fate worse than death, and also for the benefit of those who are laboring under similar afflictions that they may know where they can get relief It is now about eight months since my eyes were cured and they still remain good I can see to read the finest print without difficulty and my eyes can bear the strongest light without pain
